Working with Facts and Figures

Use the graphs, maps and tables to complete the activities below.

1. Using the graph 'How many refugees are there?' describe in one sentence the overall trend shown.
2. Name the region that has the most refugees. What percentage of refugees come from this region?
3. Use the 'Major refugee populations worldwide' map to:

- a) name the largest refugee population
  - b) name the second largest refugee population
  - c) name the largest refugee population in Africa
  - d) name the country that hosts the most refugees
  - e) name the country that hosts the most refugees per capita
  - f) describe the global pattern of where the major refugee populations of the world are. Think about hemispheres, continents, regions, developed (rich) or developing (poor) countries.
  - g) give reasons why you think this pattern exists.
4. On a map of the world locate and label in two different colours:
    - a) the countries with the 10 largest movements of refugees during 2002
    - b) the countries with the 10 largest movements of refugees returning home in 2002You will need to decide how to show the countries that feature in both lists.
For increased visual impact use arrows to show direction of movement (i.e. in or out of a country).
  - c) Give your map the title 'Main refugee movements in 2002' and a key to explain what the two colours and arrows represent.
  - d) Write a brief description of what your map shows.

5. For the bar graph showing resettlement of refugees:
  - a) Find the 2002 population figures for the countries shown.
  - b) Work out the ratio of refugees resettled per head of population for each country.
  - c) Rank them and then draw a bar graph.
  - d) How does this graph compare to the original one?

6. Imagine a refugee wanting to resettle in New Zealand has made contact with you. They are aware New Zealand is one of about 20 countries in the world that works with UNHCR on a resettlement programme and has an annual refugee quota.
  - a) Write a list of five questions you think a refugee would want to ask.
  - b) Use the internet and other sources to find the answers to these questions.

Tip: a good place to start is the New Zealand Immigration Service at www.immigration.govt.nz

- c) Present your questions and answers in a letter format that you could send to a refugee overseas.
